

Todd Capp began playing drums in South Side Chicago basements, where jazz met psychedelia and the avant-garde learned the blues. He currently resides in Downtown Brooklyn, where he continues to explore the shapes of swing – sonic textures and tangents of the space-time continuum and the human heart – through improvised music.

